

weekly letters from Mr. Bryan would be sent out to all Democratic clubs.

Mr. Bryan opened by referring to the primary system, and declared that it had revolutionized politics, and that it had now come from the voters, he said, "instead of some central authority."

The committee, he said, had been selected by the people of their several communities, and with authority to represent them. "I recognize," said Mr. Bryan, "that in speaking to you I am speaking to men who are the leaders among their people, and being leaders chosen by the people themselves, you can work with an effectiveness that is impossible where the wishes of the people are ignored."

Mr. Bryan emphasized the importance of the position which the committee occupied, and declared that no candidate will win success if the work of organization is neglected. "We may have a majority, as I believe we have," he said, "but if that majority is not made effective at the polls, it counts for nothing. In a city organization is even more important than in the country, because you have registration as well as voting to look after. It will be your business to see, first, that every Democratic vote is registered, and second, that every Democratic vote is cast; third, that every Democratic vote is counted, and fourth, that false registration and repeating are prevented."

The Democratic candidate admonished his listeners that before the day of registration they could be instrumental in assisting the organization of clubs, and that these clubs could assist in the circulation of literature that is needed. "You can find out what the voters are talking about," he said, "in what subjects they are interested, and what arguments need to be answered. You can assist in the collection of campaign funds. With several thousand Democrats at work a few dollars collected by each means a considerable sum for the campaign fund. While in every campaign there is more or less splitting of the ticket—that is, Republicans willing to vote for a part of our ticket, but not for the whole ticket. There can be no separation of the candidates," he said, "so far as the organization is concerned."

He declared that he wanted the State and county organizations to co-operate with the national organization. The national organization, he said, stood ready to co-operate to the fullest extent with the local organizations. "The reports that come to us from all sections of the country," he said, "and which we have every reason to believe that if we all work together and work diligently we shall be able to rejoice over a victory, State and National."

M'CARREN IN CONTROL

Carries Eighteen of the Twenty-Three Assembly Districts in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, September 8.—By carrying eighteen of the twenty-three assembly districts of Brooklyn, Senator Patrick H. McCarren to-day maintained his political control in Kings county, only four of the seven re-voted districts returning anti-McCarren leaders. William B. Medley, in the Fourth Assembly District; William R. McGuire, in the Sixth; and William A. Doyle, of the Ninth, failed in their effort to dethrone the pro-McCarren leaders. In the Twenty-third, Tenth, Eleventh and Twenty-second Districts the insurgents were successful. This, however, will not affect the situation.

HOT DEBATE OVER ACTION OF WILSON

Veterinarians Differ as to Propriety of His Recommendations to Colleges.

PHILADELPHIA, September 8.—The session of the forty-fifth annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical Association, which opened here to-day, resolved itself largely into a hot debate on the attitude of Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, with reference to veterinary schools. President W. H. Daly, of Baton Rouge, La., in his annual address, praised Secretary Wilson for his efforts to elevate the profession and fix a high standard for those seeking service under the government.

Later in the proceedings Dr. Leonard Pearson, dean of the veterinary department of the University of Pennsylvania, presented a report for the committee on intelligence and education, in which he severely criticized Secretary Wilson's action with reference to the veterinary schools. Acting on the report of a committee of five members of the association, Secretary Wilson has rated the various schools with reference to the eligibility of their graduates for service with the government, suggesting certain courses and how they should be arranged.

Dr. Pearson said that Secretary Wilson should be authorized to dictate to the schools as to what their courses should be or how they should be arranged.

Dr. Tait Butler, of Raleigh, N. C., representing the committee which had reported to Secretary Wilson, in answer to Dr. Pearson's report, and defended the secretary, whose efforts, he declared, were to establish a basis of high proficiency for veterinarians. He intimated that "Dr. Pearson's vanity was hurt," because Secretary Wilson, in specifying that certain courses should be followed out in schools if the graduates were to be eligible for government service, had tentatively dictated to him what he must do.

Speeches were made in support of both sides. It was finally determined that Dr. Pearson's report and a complete report of all the addresses and comments to Secretary Wilson.

THE LOYALTY OF AUSTRALIA

Officials Send Explanations Regarding the Visit of the Fleet.

LONDON, September 8.—The Government, Sir Thomas Gibson-Carmichael, on behalf of all the ministers, has sent a cable dispatch to the Earl of Crewe, Secretary of State for the Colonies, in connection with the enthusiastic reception of the American fleet at Melbourne "will only serve to strengthen, if that is possible, the feeling of loyalty which is so deeply rooted in Victoria."

Alfred Deakin, the Premier of the Commonwealth, has also issued a statement, which has been made public, here, explaining in a similar way that the reception of the Americans does not imply any failure to recognize the ship of the Commonwealth, or Great Britain's naval power. He thinks that perhaps the British admiralty was guilty of an oversight in its omission to bring home to the minds of the people in the remote parts of the empire the real magnitude of the British navy by means of object lessons, such as the one given by America, but he adds, in welcome to the Americans, was not simply a meeting between Americans and Australians, but of Australians representing the whole people of the empire, and the fleet representing the people of the United States.
